Part 41, focuses on Navy fuel purchase contracts for Saudi Arabian oil and businesses' use of institutional advertising for tax exemptions during and after the war. The overall objective of these studies was to characterize the pharmacodynamic effects of angiotensin-converting enzyme (ACE) inhibitors and pimobendan in horses. Both are considered standard of care in the management of congestive heart failure in dogs but the lack of data in horses has prevented the rationale use of these drugs in this species. First, the pharmacodynamic effects of 4 ACE inhibitors (benazepril, ramipril, quinapril, and perindopril) were investigated in healthy horses. Of these, oral benazepril (0.5 mg/kg) was the most effective at inhibiting serum ACE activity and its effect was not affected by feeding. In an attempt to determine the ideal dose and dosing interval for a clinical trial in horses, the lowest tested dose of benazepril that resulted in optimal attenuation in the response of systolic blood pressure to exogenous administration of angiotensin I administration was determined. The percentage of inhibition after administration of benazepril at 1.0 mg/kg was significantly greater than that achieved after 0.5 mg/kg but not significantly different from that achieved at higher doses. It was concluded that oral benazepril at a dose of 1.0 mg/kg every 12 h would be recommended for future investigations. Third, a prospective randomized double-blinded placebo-controlled trial was conducted to assess the echocardiographic and hormonal changes in response to 28 days of oral benazepril in horses with volume overload caused by mitral or aortic valve insufficiency. Treatment with benazepril resulted in a significant increase in cardiac output and fractional shortening, suggesting a decrease in afterload. Despite profound serum ACE inhibition, renin, angiotensin II, aldosterone, and chemistry variables were not significantly different between treatment groups or time points. Finally, the cardiovascular effects of intravenous (IV) and intragastric (IG) pimobendan at a dose of 0.25 mg/kg were investigated in healthy adult horses. Both IV and IG pimobendan had significant chronotropic effects but only the IV formulation had the desired inotropic effects. Collectively, the work reported herein provides the data necessary for the rationale use of benazepril in horses with valvular insufficiency and provides preliminary data for future investigations regarding the use of pimobendan in horses. The work of a crime scene investigator requires stellar organizational skills and razor-sharp attention to detail. Developing these skills is best achieved through hands-on training simulating actual case events. Crime Scene Processing and Investigation Workbook takes students from the classroom to the field and into the lab to explore a range of scenarios they will likely encounter on the job. Exercises presented in this practical handbook include assessing the scene, crime scene photography and mapping, fingerprint evidence, documentation, impression-casting, bloodstain pattern recognition, and advanced techniques for scene processing. The book also examines the actions of the initial responding officer, highlights special scene considerations, and describes the role of crime scene analysis and reconstruction. Designed to complement Gardner's Practical Crime Scene Processing and Investigation, this manual uses a consistent format throughout to ensure assimilation. Each chapter begins with a list of key terms and provides learning outcomes that describe the goal of the chapter. Tasks are then broken down into specific segments, with objectives, necessary materials, and a concept overview provided to promote heightened focus on salient points in the chapter. Post-lab questions enable students to test their grasp of the material and sample worksheets are provided that can be duplicated and used in actual case scenarios. By practicing the techniques described in this manual, students will be ready when they encounter them for the first time on the job. Warren Commission hearings. This monograph deals with some inverse problems of mathematical physics. It introduces new methods for studying inverse problems and gives obtained results, which are related to the conditional well posedness of the problems. The main focus lies on time-domain inverse problems for hyperbolic equations and the kinetic transport equation.
